Today it snowed, and outside the studio it piled up its feathery blankets of white, making a natural stage setting that is more beautiful than painted scenery ever could be. The girls came scurrying on to the warm stage, which is all closed in with a glass roof, their cheeks as red as Christmas apples and looking as bright, bundled up in their furs, as little chipmunks. Quite a storm blew up, but we were as cozy as a country fireplace, and what cared we for storms when we were about to stage a carnival scene?

A tremendous set was built in the studio, a ballroom with a café far in the background. A large staircase led to the balcony where sat the musicians, tuning their violins, for not even actors and actresses can find the spell of the carnival upon them if their spirits are not stimulated by music.

Outside the wind howled and the skies were foreboding. In the dressing room, girls were getting into their masquerade costumes, putting their makeup on, while on the stage property men were lavishing with the decorations. Fruits and flowers, a banquet spread and barrels of confetti were carried toward this center of activity, and the director was already rehearsing his leading actors, who as a rule are kept well in the foreground, being the central interest.

A Beautiful Scene.
It was such a beautiful sight when the girls came dancing down in their harlequin costumes, that we drifted away from our own corners toward the ballroom scene. We laughed at some of the men as they passed us, for they looked quite awkward and a bit sheepish in all their regalia. One broad-shouldered man squirmed uncomfortably in his velvet doublet and pink silk tights. On his head was a hat with a long trailing feather and his misdeeds in sword clanked noisily as he stumbled along.

"Who is he?" asked one of the property boys who had stopped to speak to him.

"Him?" and the boy accompanied his answer with a long, low whistle. "He came from the West, that fellow did. 'Dead Man Jim' they call him in Arizona. One of the cowboys told me he killed a couple of sheep men who came too close to his cattle ranch. He's some cuckoo in them togs, ain't he?"

We turned to watch him, as he sneaked out of sight, nor did he ever show up again until the time had arrived for all the pay slips to be cashed at the little window. Then I saw him in cowboy fashion stampeding the foreground.

The music echoed through the studio and then the dance began. The couples whirled around, laughing and chattering briskly. Then there followed a little window. Then I saw him in cowboy fashion stampeding the foreground.

It was so beautiful we were drawn to it like a magnet and hovered there until the director called "Finis," and they fled to their dressing rooms to take off their makeup.

"This is the most beautiful, interesting and amusing play in the world. No wonder girls are so eager to become moving picture actresses," cried a visitor enthusiastically.

The Other Side of the Picture.
"It sounds all lovely," ventured one of the girls who had just come off the scene, and it looks like a picnic. But it isn't—it's work, and the hardest kind of work, too."

B VIRGINIA TEMPLE

Hippodrome.
"X-3," a detective story, will be the feature for today with Murdock MacQuarrie and Eddie Polo in the leading roles. It is claimed that this is a detective story out of the ordinary class. Andre Cuneo, a counterfeiter, after serving a sentence in Italy, comes to America. He escapes capture and joins the "gang." John Gordon, a bank teller, is also a member of the "gang," and is known as "X-3." Ethel, Gordon's daughter, the girl in the case, is in love with Hilton. In an argument between Gordon and a member of the gang, Gordon is killed. The murderers escape and the blame is laid on Hilton. Hilton escapes in, straightens things out and Hilton and Ethel are married. For tomorrow there will be a special picture of "Uncle Sam at Work."

Moore's Garden.
Today and tomorrow Charles Richman, widely known by reason of his exceptionally fine work in "The Battle Cry of Peace," will head the main portion of the program in "The Heights of Hazard." This piece, which is also from the pen of Cyrus Townsend Brundage, solves a domestic problem, and introduces many thrills new in the art of motion pictures. Richman is supported by an able cast, including Eleanor Woodruff, Charles Kent, Kitty Delore and others. The added attraction will be Gladys Hulette, in an entertaining comedy drama entitled, "The Name of the Law." Special music will be rendered by the Garden Symphony Orchestra.

Penn Gardens.
For today the special feature will be, "The Danger Signal," a George Klein Photoplay in five parts, with Hoops and Ruby Hoffman. The picture is said to contain many thrilling scenes, and is brimful of excitement. Tomorrow's premier will be "Barbara Frietchie," with Mary Miles Minter and Mrs. Thomas W. Whitton. The story of "Barbara Frietchie," needs no introduction to the average American. The film is said to be interesting not only for the story, but also for the fine production in addition to the feature, there are always several reels of comedies and news pictures shown at the Garden.

Auditorium.
"The Turn of the Road," featuring Virginia Pearson, Robert Galliard, Naomi Childers and Joseph Kilgour, will be the special film for tonight. For tomorrow, the feature will be Vivian Martin, Sam Hardy and Herbert Vest in "Over Night." These feature films are said to be very interesting. The special play for Saturday will be, "A Price for Folly," featuring Edith Storey.

Virginia.
The feature photo play for today will be "Salomy Jane," a dramatization of the book of the same name. The story of Salomy Jane is a familiar one and its production in motion pictures is said to add to the story. Every day at this theater is a Chaplin day. The imitable Charley is shown here daily in one of his popular pictures. Today he will be seen in his "New Profession." Charley amuses the children immensely. Chaplin in "Carmen," said to be one of his funniest pictures, will be shown at this theater shortly.

Crandall's.
Today and tomorrow Henry B. Waitland and Edna Mayo, in "The Missing Lady," will be the premier attraction. This story has a clever plot, an old one though—nothing more than a comedy version of "The Iron Strain," in which the man wins the lady by force, and then, though hating him, at last saves him—and loves him. But it is a theme eternally interesting, and during the action of the picture it is given many clever turns.

Frank Crane at present holds the fort alone in the huge new Paragon studio where he is putting the statuesque Kitty Gordon through her last experience as a film star. This picture, adapted from the novel, "As in a Looking Glass," deals with official and social life in Washington, the nation's capital and offers both Mr. Crane and Miss Gordon exceptional opportunities for colorful and brilliant effects.

Capt. "Jack" Crawford Pleas for Defense at the Strand Theater

CAPT. "JACK" CRAWFORD.

"Sure I am going to vote for Roosevelt—if he is a candidate." So speaks Capt. "Jack" Crawford, who, in addition to being a veteran of the civil war and a former scout for United States troops in the days of Indian fighting, is a poet and an author of plays and short stories. He also is a lecturer.

The last-named pursuit he now is following, and in lecturing he is employing all his art and experience as a war veteran, Indian fighter, poet and writer that the country "may be stirred to realize the crying need for preparedness." He appears alongside of the screen at the Strand Theater as the many reels of the "Battle Cry of Peace" are run off. His appearance, of the fashion of fifty years ago, is quaint in contrast to the modern warriors deploying on the screen. Incidentally, he also is shown in the pictures as the orator who is rousing some 200 civil war veterans to the need of their country—preparedness.

Capt. "Jack" is 65. His father was a soldier in the civil war and he himself was wounded four times. Off the stage, where the spectators do not think it undignified, he will kick the hat off the highest head and lean over and bend his knees.

This is all done in connection with his policy of advocating the preparedness.

Watch for Herald "Movies."
Under the caption heading this department today Virginia Temple will supply the readers of The Washington Herald with all the latest news in the photo-dramatic world three times a week, when three columns will be devoted to the interests of the "movies." The days will be Wednesday, Friday and Sunday.

FORMER LUBIN STAR
DIES IN PHILADELPHIA

Arthur V. Johnson, Movie Actor, Will Be Buried Today at Chicopee Falls, Mass.

The body of Arthur V. Johnson, pioneer movie actor, who died Sunday at his home in Philadelphia, will be buried today at Chicopee Falls, Mass. Actors, actresses and magnates of the moving picture industry attended the funeral of the former Lubin star at Philadelphia yesterday. Johnson suffered a nervous breakdown a year ago and disobeyed the orders of physicians to take a complete rest for six months.

Hundreds of local movie fans received with regret news of the death of Johnson, who became popular on the screen in the early days of the split-reel comedies. He was associated with Mary Pickford, Dorothy Bernard, Mack Sennett, King Baggot and other stars in the old Biograph and Imp companies. He was one of the many talented screen artists who have been turned out by David W. Griffith, producer and director.

Johnson was 39 years old and a native of Davenport, Iowa. His father was Rev. Dr. M. A. Johnson, retired Episcopal minister, who now resides at Northampton, Mass.

In Choicest Cockney.
Wheler Oakman, the popular Seltz star is a native Washington, D. C., and tells with zest of his experiences in Panama during the filming of "The Ne'er Do Well." "You can imagine," says Wheeler, "how funny it sounded to a Southerner like myself, when addressed by a black man similar to our own negro, to have him speak in the choicest Cockney. It knocked me a twister the first time it occurred and to tell the truth, I never got used to it."

Peace Party Elects.
The local branch of the Woman's Peace Party has elected these officers: Mrs. W. Thompson Burck, chairman; Mrs. John J. White, vice chairman; Mrs. Charles Edward Russell, vice chairman; Miss Edith Goode, secretary; Miss Grace Needham, treasurer; Mrs. Gilson Gardner and Mrs. Jessie Hardie Mackaye, auditors. Miss Janet Richards is national chairman of the District of Columbia, and Mrs. Kemp and Mrs. Louis Post are vice chairmen of the National Association, ex officio.

Complain to Utilities Commission.
The University Heights Citizens' Association complained to the Public Utilities Commission yesterday of crowded conditions on the Brookland cars during the evening rush hours, and requested that the Washington Railway and Electric Company be asked to operate express cars on this line between 4:30 and 6 o'clock in the evening, as is done on several other lines. The complaint was forwarded by D. H. Oertly.

Honor Committee Chosen.
The following have been chosen to constitute the honor committee of the senior law class of George Washington University: H. M. Dix, of New York; M. Manning Marcus, of Wisconsin; Will E. Greig, of Texas; Homer Tipton Shaver of Oregon, and Alexander Robeson Henry F. Wiegand and Harry H. Semmes, of the District of Columbia.
